Unit 1: Independent Reading

Introduction and Established Goals: Students will begin the year selecting a text of their choice to read independently. This unit is intended to incentivize the reading experience. It will introduce and reinforce certain reading and writing skills, such as active reading and reflective journaling.

Desired Outcome(s):

Students will consider and reflect upon their own reading preferences, including genre and writing style.

Students will use various comprehension strategies to comprehend text and use it in discussion and writing.

Students will identify and articulate the text's theme and additional literary devices.

Students will analyze quotes effectively to reflect theme and character development.

Students will use creativity to show their learning.

Common Core Standard(s):

Unit 2: The Teenage Experience/Loss of Innocence

Introduction and Established Goals: Students will explore the unique experiences of the teenager. Students will study the evolution of the teenager, with its beginnings as an advertising strategy, to understanding their own teenage experiences. Students will see the commonalities among teenagers, but also analyze the differences among them. Additionally, students will explore how innocence is lost and how the act of growing up naturally creates a loss of innocence. Students will explore experiences that prevent or accelerate the loss of innocence. They will also explore bigger philosophical concepts, such as how do we know if what we are experiencing is reality. Students will analyze the stream of consciousness writing style, tone/mood, and the unreliable narrator.

Desired Outcome(s):

Students will learn the evolution of the teenager and articulate similarities and differences between different generations of teenagers.

Students will explore innocence and explain what loss of innocence entails.

Students will use various strategies to comprehend text and apply to discussion and writing.

Students will explain the difference between tone and mood and identify text examples.

Students will effectively analyze quotations and connect to theme.

Students will craft a well-developed analytical essay using text evidence.

Unit 3: The Pursuit of the American Dream

Introduction and Established Goals: Students will learn about the American Dream, its origins, and its basic tenets. Students will discuss how closely intertwined the American Dream is with the pursuit of material success. Students will evaluate whether material success brings happiness and whether the American Dream is best achieved this way. Students will begin to analyze today’s version of the American Dream. Students will also discuss the nature of dreams, in general, and whether having big or singular dreams is the best way to achieve stability and success.

Desired Outcome(s):

Students will define the American Dream and explain how it has evolved over time.
 Students will analyze our current society and evaluate whether the American Dream is achievable.
 Students will use various strategies to comprehend text and apply to discussion and writing.
 Students will effectively analyze quotations and connect to theme.
 Students will craft a well-developed analytical essay using text evidence.

Unit 4: The Death of the American Dream

Introduction and Established Goals: This unit compares two plays about the failure of the American Dream and students explore how the American Dream is not a guarantee for everyone. Students will apply their earlier discussions and lessons about the American Dream to explore how this concept is a myth. Students will also explore family dynamics and how social and economic pressure can strain the nuclear family. Students will conduct their own research on the American Dream and identify a text that represents some of the common themes discussed.

Desired Outcome(s):

Students will develop their analysis of the American Dream.

Students will compare two texts, analyzing theme, character development, and socioeconomic/racial representation.

Students will use various strategies to comprehend text and apply to discussion and writing.

Students will identify and analyze quotations that connect to theme, character development, or socioeconomic representation.

Students will craft an effective comparative essay, using appropriate text evidence.
