

We'd like to take a moment to recognize what has been happening in our society recently. We have taken the last few weeks to reflect on the Black Lives Matter Campaign and to determine how to approach this subject in our community. While we don't often appear as diverse as some of our surrounding communities, there is so much to be learned from these events and we need to appreciate that diversity is demonstrated in many different ways.

As a district, we are committed to embracing diversity and want to encourage discussion and awareness to what is happening in the world around us.

We believe in equity for all and will continue to provide opportunities for our students to attain a better understanding of our history and how it translates into today's current climate. We will continue to make this a priority in our district, and are looking forward to open and honest discussions with our students when we return to school this fall.
